

A Productivity Ap That'll Make Your Life Easier

This time of year we are all so busy trying to complete our students, place them in jobs, and just make it through the school year sane. I've tried several productivity apps—many that I love and many that just didn't work for me. For the next few weeks I'm going to publish productivity tech tips that have helped me get more done in less time or have a very good rating for doing so, because every minute counts when you are busy.

Here is the first one: Pocket

One-sentence Benefit: Save articles to read for later (also known as: de-cluttering your browser tabs!)

Does anyone else have a browser tab that looks like this?

Above is what my browser looks like on a good day. When there's so much content out there to consume and absorb today, it's hard to keep everything organized without cluttering your browser tab.

Pocket allows you to save anything that you want to read for later, and you can decide to come back to read it on your smartphone when you're stuck in traffic, waiting in line, or taking a break.

Help Center for pocket

Free USB drive to the first person who emails me with the subject line: I've read your Pocket Tech Tip.